

ABSTRACT

A method for producing a damped part where a sand core is formed with at least one dampening structure with the sand core. The sand core with the at least one dampening structure therein is located in a mold. A part is cast from the mold and the 5 sand core. The sand core is removed from the cast part leaving the at least one dampening structure in contact with the part.